Assisted suicide law already weakening respect for life

The Most Reverend J. Michael Miller
(is the Catholic archbishop of Vancouver)

With assisted suicide now the law of the land and claiming its first victims, I am greatly alarmed by the impact it is having on attitudes toward those who are suffering as their lives wane.

Last week in B.C. we saw the first constitutional challenge of the new law, demanding assisted suicide for nonterminal illnesses. A few days ago, a Montreal hospital said that it may allow assisted suicide in its palliative care unit. Across Canada, some provincial governments and medical regulators are trying to compel participation in euthanasia and assisted suicide by doctors and other health-care workers.

Can anyone doubt that before long what few protections exist will be history, just as Canada's previous law against assisted suicide is history?

We need to redouble efforts to help members of our communities who feel that suicide is the answer to their suffering. We must call on our governments and on the medical community to provide better and more accessible palliative care, and on all Canadians to alleviate the loneliness of those who feel isolated and abandoned. Why is it that in a wealthy country like Canada most people still die without quality palliative or home care? Why is it that when suicide rates in many communities are at crisis level, we have no robust suicide prevention strategy? How can it be that in a society that is finally beginning to recognize the equal dignity of vulnerable and disabled persons, we are introducing laws that seem to target them for assisted suicide?

I support Canada's multi-faith and multi-cultural leaders who recently called for strong, well-resourced, national strategies for palliative care and suicide prevention in Canada. Suicide is never the answer to suffering.

I also stand with the many medical professionals who have strongly affirmed their opposition to taking part in killing their patients. Unless their right to treat patients without coercion to participate in suicide is affirmed, I can foresee widespread resistance by individuals, institutions and conscientious objectors.

We are willing to work with provincial governments and medical authorities to help resolve conflicts that will arise. We will work with regulators to ensure that whatever legislation and regulations are introduced will respect the rights of those individuals and institutions that do not wish to be complicit in homicide.

The Catholic Church's Teaching on the Eucharist

The holy Catholic Church teaches that at the moment of the Consecration of the Mass, the bread and wine on the altar truly become the Body, Blood, Soul, and Divinity of Jesus Christ. The bread and wine cease to exist, though the appearances and properties, or accidents, of bread and wine remain. This momentous change is known as transubstantiation - change of substance.

ADORATION OF THE EUCHARIST

The consecrated Host and the Precious Blood under the form of wine are given the adoration that is reserved for God alone, since they are, indeed, Almighty God Himself. This highest form of veneration is known as latria. The opinions that Christ is only in the Eucharistic elements as in a sign, or that Christ is received only spiritually, were condemned by the Council of Trent.

THE REAL PRESENCE

Both the bread and wine become the whole Jesus Christ - His Body, Blood, Soul and Divinity, so that the recipient receives Christ whole and entire under either form. Furthermore, the tiniest particle of a consecrated Host or the smallest drop of consecrated "wine" is Christ. Yet Christ is not divided, He remains one. Our Lord is present as long as the appearances of bread and wine remain. When a consecrated Host is digested or dissolved in water, and no longer has the appearance of bread, it is no longer Jesus. Thus Our Lord is present in a communicant for about 15 minutes, and one should adore Him within oneself as long as He is sacramentally present. While it is true that God is everywhere, as the Creator and Sustainer of all things, and that He is present by sanctifying grace in all souls in the state of grace, these are spiritual presences. The Eucharistic presence of Christ - Body, Blood, Soul and Divinity - is entirely unique, and it alone is referred to as the Divine Presence.

GUIDELINES FOR RECEIVING COMMUNION

To receive Holy Communion worthily, one must be in the state of grace, that is, free of having committed a mortal sin that has not been confessed and absolved in the Sacrament of Penance. To receive Holy Communion in the state of mortal sin is itself a mortal sin of sacrilege. A person who has committed a mortal sin must first cleanse his soul in the Sacrament of Penance before receiving Communion. St. Paul declares (1Cor. 11:29) that anyone who would receive the Eucharist unworthily eats and drinks judgment to himself. (The sin of sacrilegious Communion is of course forgivable in the Sacrament of Penance.) The communicant must also, in addition to being in the state of grace, have a right intention and perform the required fast. The current requirement is to fast from all food and drink (except water and true medicine) for one hour before the actual time of receiving. Fasting for a longer time - for example, for three hours or from midnight - is an excellent preparation. The serious Catholic will also strive to purify his soul from venial sin in order to provide a worthy dwelling place in his heart for Our Lord. The best immediate preparation for Holy Communion is praying the Mass devoutly. ... to be continued next bulletin.

Pope Elevates Memorial of St. Mary Magdalene to Feast Day

Recognizing St. Mary Magdalene's role as the first to witness Christ's resurrection and as a "true and authentic evangelizer," Pope Francis raised the July 22 memorial of St. Mary Magdalene to a feast on the Church's liturgical calendar." In giving St. Mary Magdalene the honour of being the first person to see the empty tomb and the first to listen to the truth of the Resurrection, "Jesus has a special consideration and mercy for this woman, who manifests her love for Him, looking for Him in the garden with anguish and suffering."

"It is right that the liturgical celebration of this woman has the same level of feast given to the celebration of the apostles in the general Roman calendar and highlights the special mission of this woman who is an example and model for every woman in the Church."

ADVERTISE: We are in search of a Volunteer Coordinator to canvass business groups from the general public or from our own parishioners to advertise in our Bulletins.
